Arts-Driven Economic Impacts

In a recent study done by the Montana Dept. of Labor, it determined that one out of every sixty people working in Montana's labor market is a working artist (over 8,000), which is comparable to the number of people that were employed in the information industry (7,450), and the mining, quarrying, and oil and gas extraction industry (6,862).

In the previous four decades, the growth in the working artist labor market has risen three times as fast as the rest of the state's labor market.

The last time an economic impact study was done about individual artists, in 2003, their sales had an economic impact of close to $250 million a year.

The non-profit arts organization sector had an annual economic impact on the state of $84 million, according to the last study done in 2003. Of this, $4 million was returned to the state in tax dollars.
